Visions and Re-Visions

"VISIONS . . .," she mused.

"Visions . . . not hallucinations, not those ghosts that haunt us over the papers yet to be written or the exams taken too lightly.

Visions . . . those private dreams that push us past the intellectual roadblocks and draw us to whatever is beyond them. There are the private visions juniors have of writing magnificent tutorial essays and the ones seniors have of moving gracefully into splendid careers.

Visions . . . or perhaps the RE-visions, the college-wide ones in which trustees see balanced budgets, admissions officers see surpluses of applicants, teachers see visionary curricula, and the Search Committee sees a presidential candidate embodying all the best of Buddha, Socrates, Mother Theresa, Rachel Carson, and Margaret Thatcher.

Visions . . . every class has them. These are ours."

Beginning a new school year

Opening Convocation

Honorary speaker, Dr. Frances Volkmann, addresses the Chatham community.

On September 13, 1990 the school year officially began with Opening Convocations. This year the entire campus was closed which enabled the entire student body, faculty, and staff the opportunity to take part in the ceremony.

Dr. Frances Volkmann, a professor of psychology from Smith College, and a member of the Board of Trustees at Chatham College gave an eloquent speech to motivate students for the upcoming months.

The pinning of colors also occurs during the ceremony, which officially invites the freshman class into the college. The junior sister class pins ribbons made of the class colors on each freshman and welcomes her to the school. This year the education certification students were also included which helped to unite the school even more.

The traditional opening of the school is memorable to all who attend.

Visions

The past year at Chatham has been one of very powerful changes. These changes have tugged at our emotions and have drawn us in. These changes have united some of us with a common sense of who we think we should be and divided others because of differing ideals about Chatham's identity. With the resignation of our president and the wavering decision over the future of our college, we have literally be in turmoil all year.

This point in Chatham's history is pivotal - are we to move forward or fall along the way? No matter how little the differences among us have grown, what is still central to us is the survival and prosperity of Chatham. The history is too rich and the beauty too deep to be given up.

-Stephanie Meifert
